

Positive Ideas for Positive Action

Join the conversation

When thinking about climate change, working together can help people feel less overwhelmed or isolated. Individual efforts which might seem small on their own have a much greater impact when undertaken collectively.

There is plenty we can do to meet the challenge.

We can be flexible and adapt through measures like nature-based solutions.

We can use tools like Adaptation Pathways to help us plan for a climate smart future.

Everyone's knowledge is important. We can all contribute ideas to adapt the way we manage flooding or drought in Somerset and develop locally informed climate adaptation plans.

Please take some time to share your ideas, your expertise and your stories.

If you want to be involved in a focussed Adaptation Pathways workshop, or stay informed about upcoming events, please fill out a contact form so that we can get in touch - everyone is welcome.

Adapting the Levels can also offer advice and funding for communities to reduce flood and drought risks by working with nature - please share your ideas!
